

Whelks are underwater snails. Most whelks are carnivores (meat eaters). They use their shell like a can opener. Whelks wedge open clam shells with their own shell, then eat the clam's soft inner tissue. Whelks, and their paper-like spiral egg cases are found in seagrass beds and on underwater mud flats.